

Head of Innovation, Design and Technologies

Position Details:

John Wollaston Anglican Community School (JWACS) has a newly created opportunity for a passionate and dedicated leader to join our team as the Head of Innovation, Design and Technologies. This full-time (1.0 FTE) position will commence in Term 1, 2025.

The Head of Innovation, Design and Technologies is a key leadership position responsible for shaping the strategic direction of 21st century learning at JWACS. The position involves leading a dynamic team of educators and support staff in Digital Technologies, Design and Technologies and the Library Resource Centre (LRC). The successful candidate will provide visionary leadership and strategic direction, ensuring the seamless integration of information management and technology to enhance teaching, learning, research and administration. By fostering a collaborative and innovative environment, the Head of Innovation, Design and Technologies will empower the department to achieve the School's mission and strategic goals.

About You:

We are seeking a leader with a growth mindset, driven by a passion for innovation and technology. The successful candidate will thrive in dynamic settings and demonstrate a commitment to continuous improvement. Your enthusiasm for integrating technology in education, along with your ability to inspire and motivate others make you an ideal fit for this role.

New Metrics:

We are proud to be one of four schools in Western Australia partnered with the University of Melbourne as a member of the “New Metrics for success: transforming what we value in schools” program, driving innovation and excellence in education.
